

Drew High shows leadership to chamber class

Drew High School today was the starting point for about 30 students in the Clayton County Chamber of Commerce Leadership Clayton Program that visited the school to learn more about education and its overall impact on the viability of the county.

School Principal Gary Townsend, above, welcomed the group to campus where he and Assistant Principal David Meinschein conducted a tour of the school.

Superintendent Edmond Heatley provided leadership students with a district update before they departed to further their study at Clayton State University. Community Liaison Rhonda Burnough coordinated the leadership student's visit to the system.
